Extensive guideline! Its such a great go through. It is definitely basic but surprises in the 50 % of the pdf. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

The Department of Health of the City of New York has regulations requiring a report every week concerning the existence of infectious diseases among those handling milk. The dairymen are required to report to the manager of the shipping station and he in turn notifies the health department. Even if these regulations were uniformly obeyed they would not protect against bacilli carriers. (See Appendix D.) Temperature standard. New York, Boston, and other cities require that milk be immediately cooled to 50F. or below, and that it shall not exceed this temperature before delivery. The requirement is desirable, and does not necessitate complicated methods of examination. This regulation very properly necessitates the use of ice at the producing farm, and the use of refrigerator cars where the milk is transported long distances. Its strict enforcement tends to eliminate the sale of milk from stores where adequate refrigerating facilities are not provided. In a large area of the country, the Southern States and California, the universal enforcement of such a standard is out of the question because of the absence of natural ice. In large dairies, artificial refrigeration may be used, but the smaller producers could not afford the expense. Numerical determinations of bacteria in milk. Bacterial counts may be made to yield valuable information when conditions that will permit the comparison of results are maintained. The first requisite is the practice of uniformity in technic. Under such conditions, the examination of the milk...
