Not illustrated. 1821 Excerpt: .of several gentlemen to establish a new weekly paper, for the purpose of affording greater scope to the exuberance of genius, which I am sure, from your wellknown liberality of sentiment, will meet with your most cordial support, I am emboldened, humble as my pretensions are, to solicit the public patronage, and offer myself as the Editor. To discharge the duties of this office satisfactorily, it is not requisite that I should possess an extraordinary degree of intellect; for, unlike editors in general, who have to insert their own lucubrations to fill a vacant page, I am doubly assured by the very high opinion I entertain of the talents of its intended supporters, and by their own repeated professions of strenuously exerting them, that the only difficulty in my way will be the selection of such strokes of satire, or flashes of wit, as may best accord with the taste of the moment. I am positive that nothing flat, low, or insipid, will ever be found on my files---a few touches beyond the sublimity of Milton; a style more easy and elegant than Addison; powers more splendid and versatile than Shakspeare s may occasionally be met with; but no paucity of materials, (except it be of paper,) to perpetuate the literary fame of the independent and highly-gifted youths, whose chosen servant I am anxious to become. I think I can command every requisite for immediate publication; pens and ink I have no objection to furnish,...
